Matheny Goldman Architecture + Interiors partnered with the City of Huntsville and Torch Technologies to remodel and expand Torch's existing south Huntsville headquarters, resulting in a much needed boost to revitalization efforts in the area. Torch Technologies, an employee-owned technology services and solutions company, began the project with two existing office buildings on the property, which were renovated to achieve optimized functionality and a cohesive aesthetic, and then connected by a new conference center. In honor of the U.S. military, Torch has named the combined office and conference facility the Freedom Center. The expanded campus will allow the company to better serve its current 300 Huntsville employees and support future growth. It will also support Torch's focus on customer and community service.
