At this site, a small Victorian vernacular farmhouse was originally constructed in the late 1800's but had been expanded over several decades, including a "craftsman" porch embellishment that was added in the 1920's. After sitting vacant for several years, the new owner wanted to do an extensive renovation and remove several layers of poorly constructed additions. The owner liked the unique charm of the Craftsman porch elements, and wanted them to remain and be used as a reference for the new addition.
